Murdoch Psychology Clinic

The Murdoch Psychology Clinic offers a wide range of accessible psychological services to the general public.

We provide assessment, individual and group therapy for adults and a range of assessments and interventions for children, couples and families. Our treatment approach is tailored to individuals and is based on current research and recommended best practice.

We offer help with:

- anxiety, depression and stress
- headache and pain management
- chronic fatigue
- sleep problems
- bereavement and grief
- adjustment, trauma and loss
- behavioural, emotional & adjustment problems in children & adolescents
- social skills & communication difficulties
- psychological difficulties related to old age
- cognitive assessments

The clinic is located at Murdoch University, South St.

Our services are provided by clinical and professional psychology trainees at Murdoch School of Psychology who are undertaking post graduate training. All trainees are registered with AHPRA and are supervised by experienced Clinical Psychologists. The clinic also operates as a training and psychology research centre.

We are a low fee service and offer discounts for concession card holders. The clinic is easily accessible by public transport and free parking is also available.

Our services are professional, welcoming and confidential. We work with people of all ages, background and cultures.
